

Table of contents

5	Acknowledgements
7	Foreword
9	Volume Series Overview
11	I. Research framework
11	Presentation of the project
14	Registration methods and presentation of the catalogue
17	II. Predynastic Rock Art
17	Questions of chronological attribution
20	General spatial distribution and visibility of engravings
24	The themes represented: hunting, war and navigation
35	III. Configuration, uses of places and marking by images. The second and fifth northern diverticula of the WAS
41	IV. Focus on a few stations
41	Locus 010
42	Locus 020.B9
43	Locus 048.B1.P2
43	Locus 162
46	Locus 230
46	Locus 283.B1
48	Locus 318, 406 et 435.B1.P1
48	Locus 332
49	Locus 346.B1.P3
50	Locus 510
51	Locus 543
54	Military Camp N
55	Military Camp O
59	V. Synthetic studies
59	Navigating the WAS
61	Animal representation
	Inventory and variety
	Elephants and giraffes: chronological, environmental and cultural markers.
	Ibex, oryx, addax, cynomolgus sheep, cuffed sheep: planting the landscape
	Wild donkeys
	Rare animals: birds and cats

	Dogs, indispensable helpers
	Domestic cattle
75	Human representation
	The bow and the archers (contribution from M. Bailly)
84	The iconography of Min and the predynastic archer
	Atypical body language and postures
	The Min mast, acrobats and rites of passage
	The women
101	VI. Cross-checking engravings in the eastern concession
107	VII. Relative and absolute chronology. The forbidden paradigm
109	VIII. Predynastics, but not Naqadans!
117	IX. In conclusion
127	Bibliography
135	Table of contents